Introduction

Adam graduated from Birmingham University's Music department in 2017 with a 1st class honours in music. During his study he majored in instrumental and acousmatic composition as well as integrating a wide variety of musicological studies. He also took a year abroad as part of his degree studying audio production, post-production and musical composition in Auckland, New Zealand. Since graduating Adam has continued to pursue a career in the creative sector working in post-production television. During his career he has worked in many varied and interesting roles becoming familiar with all aspects of the post-production pipeline. Most recently, he has become a Dubbing Mixer working on a variety of projects for major UK and international broadcasters. His ambition is to continue working on world-class content and move into drama, feature film and animation creating innovative sound design and mixes.
